Durga Puja is a grand occasion in Kolkata when the city forgets its worries and yields to sudden excitement of celebration and worships. People buy new clothes from stores which remain open till late night and offer discounts.

In Kolkata, Puja festivities go on for four days. On the fourth day, that is the last day of the festival, the images are taken out in a procession at about 6 o'clock in the evening accompanied by brass band for immersion. There at the banks of the Hooghly river, with loud cries and reverence, the images are pushed into the river.
